Steamboat Springs Skiing
 Steamboat Springs, a small ranching community in Colorado, is home to the oldest skiing resort in the United States and offers fantastic skiing in a genuine relaxed Wild West town. SkiTown USA, as it is commonly referred to, has a 100 year old history, and the downtown streets are still home to saloons and cowboys, yet a few miles away sits a modern resort offering great accommodation right next to the slopes, upscale shopping and gourmet dining, together with access to the fabulous skiing in Steamboat. It was here in Steamboat Springs that the term "champagne powder" was invented – the mountains have an enviable amount of wonderful powder snow that falls annually, about 337", and it is one of the main attractions of Steamboat.

Steamboat Springs is spread out over 5 mountain peaks – Christie, Sunshine, Mount Werner, Snow Peak and Thunderhead Peak. Reaching a top elevation of 3220m, Steamboat offers skiing for every ability, with its' skiable terrain of 3000 acres, offering 142 trails. The tuition here is excellent, and, although Steamboat Springs has a reputation as an intermediate and advanced resort, beginners can enjoy the separate learn-to-ski area and then progress to the gentle blues.
